A Vancouver dancer has created a performance inspired by the Stanley Cup riot.

Former Ballet BC dancer Edmond Kilpatrick already had a piece in the works when Vancouver's streets erupted following Game 7 of the Stanley Cup final.

"I was so disturbed by what happened," Kilpatrick said, "I reconfigured the work I was doing so I could comment about (the riot)."

He said the piece explores

"This performance should make people feel empowered — it's a fun thing and you don't know what you're going to get."

EDMOND KILPATRICK

three groups that participated in the riot: the instigators, the people who were swept up by it and the people who watched in horror.

Kilpatrick's piece is a part of the popular contemporary performance series Dances for a Small Stage, which returns to the Legion on the Drive (2205 Commercial Dr.) Aug. 10 to 12.

This is the 24th edition of the series, which promises compelling new works on the tiny 10-by-13-foot stage.

"It's a fun format and casual setting — you can sit and have a beer and everyone is really relaxed," said Kilpatrick. "The audience is looking for something different, something off-the-wall that will hit you from the side."

Kilpatrick will perform the work with fellow former Ballet BC dancer Leon Feizo-Gas and Science Friction co-founder Farley Johansson.

Muggers target teens for gadgets

Teens are getting mugged for their electronic devices, Surrey RCMP said yesterday.

RCMP Cpl. Drew Grainger said despite a decrease in the city's robbery rate, police have seen an increase in street-level stealing. "Typically young people in their teens (are being) targeted for their electronic devices such as iPhones, iPods and BlackBerrys," he said.

"When they're texting or have their headphones in, they're not completely aware of their environment and may not realize that they're about to be preyed upon." ● PHYLICIA TORREVILLAS

Cheap Trick cancels PNE gig

American rock band Cheap Trick has cancelled its Sept. 1 performance in Vancouver at the PNE because the stage provider, Mega-Stage, is the same company responsible for a stage that collapsed on the band during Ottawa's Bluesfest last month. ► Farewell Foundation director and right-to-die advocate Russel Ogden speaks to media outside B.C. Supreme Court yesterday.

Right-to-die advocates begin court battle

- Farewell Foundation to challenge Criminal Code around assisted suicide
- Director expects case to last years and end up at Supreme Court of Canada

MATT KIELTYKA
@METRONEWS.CA

Literally an issue of life and death, the debate over assisted suicide landed in a British Columbia courtroom yesterday.

The Farewell Foundation began what is expected to be an arduous and drawn-out legal battle in B.C. Supreme Court over the right to die with dignity.

Lawyer Jason Gratl launched a pair of applications aimed at recognizing the group as a lawful organization, and arguing the Criminal Code violates the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and forces terminally ill patients to needlessly suffer at the end of their lives.

But whatever the outcome, it won't end in a provincial court.

Farewell Foundation director Russel Ogden said the Supreme Court of Canada will ultimately have to rule on the issue, and he's prepared to take it all the way to Ottawa.

"Either way, there will be an appeal by ourselves or the attorney general," Ogden said of this week's court hearings.

"This should be done in the highest court possible. It could take five to six years to get there, but we're prepared to go the distance on this."

Washington and Oregon states currently have right-to-die legislation along with several countries in Europe.

Ogden says polls show 75 per cent of people in B.C. support assisted suicide in some circumstances.

The B.C. Civil Liberties Association is also championing the right to die and has launched separate legal action.

Child allegedly shot by rifle

A child is believed to be stable after having allegedly been shot by accident in suburban Richmond.

Neighbours of a family of four at Whistler Court, near Steveston, say a six-year-old boy was shot while playing outside in the yard.

Police confirmed someone at the home had been shot by a low-power rifle and taken to hospital with undetermined injuries.

Few details are being released as the investigation is underway.

Neighbours standing outside the taped-off scene were told by police the incident may have been an accident.

"It's very emotional to hear about it," said student Andrew Welle. "Police just told us there was a shooting and it was an accident. It's a nice neighbourhood, very safe."

Beware of sun damage, skin expert says

Now that summer has finally arrived, Vancouverites need to start protecting themselves from the sun.

Dr. Harvey Lui, dermatologic oncologist at the B.C. Cancer Agency, said there are precautions Canadians need to take to prevent skin cancer.

"I like to keep my message simple," said Lui. "People need to first prevent sun damage and then be aware of the signs."

But while Canadians are beginning to examine their skin for suspicious moles in search of melanoma, most don't know to look for signs of non-melanoma skin cancers.

► Team Spain to wow spectators tonight using pyrotechnic display illustrating a journey from Barcelona to Vancouver

PHYLICIA TORREVILLAS
@METRONEWS.CA

Defending champion Spain will illuminate Vancouver's sky tonight as it goes for back-to-back wins in the Celebration of Light.

"Of course we're here to win it," said Marc Jouffroy yesterday as he and his team from Barcelona-based fireworks company Pirotecnia Igual prepped for the second night of the annual fireworks festival over English Bay.

Spain won the competition last year with its dramatic Heaven and Hell theme that featured a thrilling display of colour and musical synchronicity to recreate a fight between light and darkness.

This year's show display called Odyssey will focus on a journey from Barcelona to different countries and cultures and finally arriving in Vancouver.

Celebration of Light producer Patrick Brault said people can expect Spain's display to be loud, with lots of whistling compositions, strobe effects and synchronized single shots.

He promised Spain will bring a lot of excitement to tonight's performance with a bigger, brighter and noisier display.

Archangel Fireworks of Canada, the 2007 and 2008 Celebration of Light champion, rounds off the three-day annual event on Saturday.

Their Then and Now theme explores music itself and the value of new versions of classic popular songs.

► Chad Harvey, left, and the rest of the crew prep yesterday for Spain's fireworks showcase on a barge in English Bay.

HELICOPTER CRASH

Search for bodies continues

RCMP in Stewart, B.C. and members of Smithers search and rescue are continuing their efforts to retrieve the bodies of three men killed in a helicopter crash on the Nelson Glacier in Northwest B.C. on Sunday.

Killed in the crash were pilot Randy Ken Lambert, 35, of Abbotsford and two passengers, Colin Dionne, 40, of Powell River and Mathieu Lefebvre-Masse, 32, of Quebec.

The Vancouver Island Helicopter Bell 407 was doing a mining survey when it crashed near Meziadin Lake on Nelson Glacier.

Bill Yearwood of the Transportation Safety Board says the weather improved enough for a recovery team to get to the area today, but it's a difficult scene for investigators because the wreckage is spread 300 metres down a steep slope. THE CANADIAN PRESS

CHEMICAL REGULATION

U.S. tables fertilizer control

More than 15 years after a fertilizer bomb was used to blow up a U.S. government building in Oklahoma City, killing 168 people, the federal government is proposing to regulate the sale and transfer of the chemical ammonium nitrate.

The proposal comes nearly four years after Congress gave the Homeland Security Department the authority to develop a program to regulate the compound.

Ammonium nitrate is one of the most common farm fertilizers in the world, and instructions for turning it into a bomb are available on the Internet.

Yesterday, the Homeland Security Department's proposal was posted on the Federal Register website.

Man declared dangerous offender for spreading HIV

HANDOUT

Ugandan immigrant was convicted in 2009 of first-degree murder and aggravated sexual assault

A man convicted of murder through HIV transmission could spend the rest of his life in jail after an Ontario court ruled yesterday that he can't be trusted to disclose his condition to future sexual partners.

Justice Thomas Lofchik granted the Crown's request to have Johnson Aziga declared a dangerous offender, which means he could be jailed indefinitely.

"I must consider that the offender has a multi-year history of deception," Lofchik told the court.

Aziga, believed to be the first person in Canada convicted of murder through the spread of HIV, has sworn to warn potential sexual partners that he is HIV positive, but to take him at his word would be "a gamble on the safety of women in this community," Lofchik said.

Aziga, a 55-year-old Ugandan immigrant from Hamilton, will serve a life sentence without the possibility of parole for 25 years for the murder convictions. But the dangerous offender designation means he will not be released on parole until the parole board decides he is no longer a threat.

His convictions are related to 11 women with whom he had unprotected sex without telling them he had HIV. Seven of the women became infected, with two dying of AIDS-related cancers.

U.S. eases rules on aid to Somalia

► Aid groups will not face prosecution if supplies end up with terrorist group al-Shabab

The Obama administration sought to assure aid groups yesterday that they can deliver desperately needed food to famine-stricken parts of Somalia without fear of prosecution, even if some assistance is diverted to al-Qaida-linked extremists blamed for helping deliver hundreds of thousands of people to the brink of starvation.

Administration officials said the U.S. has issued new guidelines on laws prohibiting material assistance to al-Shabab, which have been criticized by humanitarian organizations as a contributing factor to the crisis. Charities must only pledge their best efforts to combat

Lippestad said he last met his client on Friday, but has scheduled another meeting with him later this week.

Halifax professor to lead Canadian space team

An astrophysics professor from Saint Mary's University in Halifax could be one of the first astronomers in history to study and uncover new information about black holes and other cosmic events.

Luigi Gallo has been appointed principal investigator of the Canadian contribution to the Astro-H space mission, according to a draft press release found on SMU's website. The announcement will officially be made on Thursday.

Led by the Japanese Aerospace Exploration Agency, the international project will design and launch a unique satellite observatory capable of detecting and measuring X-rays produced by astronomical objects in the universe.

Gallo plans on using his viewing time to continue his research on the environment immediately surrounding black holes, the release said.

"The possibilities of what we could learn from this observatory are incredible," said the 38-year-old. "We will not only view certain characteristics of astronomical objects for the first time, but we will also view them with a degree of accuracy and precision unparalleled in previous X-ray missions."

Gallo's research team will work with the Neptec Design Group in Ottawa and the Canadian Space Agency to design and build the satellite's alignment system, known as the Canadian Astro-H Metrology System (CAMS).

The Canadian contribution to design, build and deliver two CAMS units will be about $5 million.

U.S. dodges default bullet

► Legislation raises borrowing cap by $900M, to be matched by budget cuts

The U.S. Senate emphatically passed emergency legislation yesterday to avoid a first-ever government default, rushing the legislation to U.S. President Barack Obama for his signature just hours before the deadline.

The vote was 74-26. Obama signed the bill little more than an hour later.

The vote pitted tea party Republican forces in the House against Obama and Democrats controlling the Senate. The resulting com-

Giffords votes

Rep. Gabrielle Giffords, who was shot in the head in January, stunned the House by appearing on the floor to vote for the debt ceiling deal Monday.

- Giffords voted for the bill, which passed 269-161.
- She entered with just minutes remaining in the vote.

promise paired an essential increase in the government's borrowing cap with promises of more than $2 trillion of budget cuts over the next decade.

Much of the measure, which the House passed Monday night, was negotiated on terms set by House Speaker John Boehner, including a demand that any increase in the nation's borrowing cap be matched by spending cuts. But the legislation also meets demands made by Obama, including debt-limit increases large enough to keep the government funded into 2013 and curbs on growth of the Pentagon budget.

The measure would provide an immediate $400 billion increase in the $14.3 trillion US borrowing cap, with $500 billion more assured this fall.

The measure establishes a special bipartisan committee to draft legislation to find up to $1.5 trillion US more in deficit cuts for a vote later this year.

Saudi Arabia. Tower

Reaching for Dubai's record

The Kingdom Tower will be more than 1,000 metres tall and cost $1.2 billion US to build. The plans make Saudi Arabia a front-runner in the race between the oil-rich Gulf nations for glitzy, architectural trophies that dot their desert territories. The projects are seen as status symbols to show off both economic success and cultural sophistication. At 828 metres, Burj Khalifa in Gulf neighbour Dubai is currently the tallest building in the world.

Investors sit tight as U.S. economy falters

The Toronto Stock Exchange tumbled yesterday as relief over the rise of the U.S. debt ceiling was countered by worries that economic weakness seen in the first half of the year was not just temporary.

The TSX composite index fell for the fifth straight session, plunging 193.31 points to 12,752.32.

Canadian investors who returned to trading after the August long weekend faced U.S. data that showed the manufacturing sector unexpectedly fell to 50.9 in July from 55.3 the previous month.

"It might be a bit bigger than a soft patch," said Chris Kuflik, wealth adviser at ScotiaMcLeod in Montreal, adding that worry over debt crises in Europe and the U.S. has led to paralysis among some investors.

"They're hunkering down because of all the uncertainty," he said.

Toyota bouncing back from quake blow

Toyota eked out a $14-million US quarterly profit and raised its annual earnings forecast yesterday despite the devastation of the earthquake and tsunami in northeastern Japan.

Still, April-June profit for the world's biggest automaker was a fraction of what it earned the same period the previous year.

All Japanese automakers were hit by a shortage of key parts after the March 11 earthquake and tsunami destroyed suppliers in northeastern Japan.

Toyota's sales were affected not only in Japan but also in the U.S. and other important markets as reduced car production fell short of demand.

But the maker of the Prius hybrid, Camry sedan and Lexus luxury models appears to be bouncing back quicker than expected, as are rival Japanese automakers. The quarterly profit was better than expected. A survey of analysts had forecast Toyota to report a quarterly loss.

SOMETHING ABOUT MEN AND THEIR BUILDINGS

JUST SAYIN' ...

PAUL SULLIVAN
METRO

This World's Tallest Building thing is completely out of control.

A Saudi prince — it's never a Saudi princess — with more money than brains must be bored with his private jets, yachts, palaces and 200 luxury autos, etc., and has decided what he really needs is the world's tallest building, so he's building a one-kilometre-tall tower in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia.

When it's finished, it will eclipse the current tallest building in the world, Dubai's Burj Khalifa, a piffling 828 metres, built by some other, lesser sheik magnate. The CN Tower is even more piffling at 553 metres.

Prince Al-Waleed Bin Talel Al Saud is Saudi Arabia's richest man. He's also the nephew of the Saudi king and clocks in at number 26 on the Forbes list of the world's richest billionaires. He's worth a cool $19.6 billion.

He owns a big stake in Citibank and GM and, believe it or not, Rupert Murdoch's News Corp., where he's the second-largest shareholder after the Murdoch family.

This guy is fascinating, and not just because he owns half of the free world. He's progressive: all for democracy and job creation, and at his offices women don't have to wear the abaya, or burqa, the body-cloaking outfit that most Saudi women have to wear in public. Sixty-five per cent of his employees are women.

He's media-savvy. He writes pieces for the New York Times. He says News of the World is a "rotten apple" that deserved to be shut down. Time magazine calls him the "Warren Buffett of Saudi Arabia."

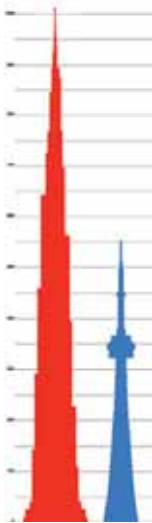

He's just like Warren Buffett ... except he wouldn't be happy living in the house he bought in 1958 for $31,000 ... in Omaha.

As rich princes go, Al-Waleed bin Talel is no doubt a gem and should be encouraged. There's just this little propensity for self-aggrandizing phallic symbols he should work on. Do they have a 12-step program for men who like women to see their big buildings?

The big building in question will include 5.4 million square feet of hotel, luxury apartments, condos and offices. The Kingdom Tower will be more than 1,000 metres high and will be the centrepiece of Kingdom City, a development that stretches two square miles beyond the bounds of wretched excess.

This is nothing. It was once designed to climb one mile into the stratosphere, but something about the sandy soil caused the prince to scale down the size of his, um, ambition.

Those of us who wonder why anyone would build one of these freaking things in the desert, where there's nothing but room, obviously doesn't understand the Saudi prince philosophy, which can be summed up in three little words: "Mine is bigger."

Worth Mentioning

KILLER. A vial of serial killer Ted Bundy's blood has been found in Florida and investigators will use the newly discovered evidence to try to solve cases that went cold decades ago.

Before he was executed in 1989, Bundy confessed to more than 30 murders and was suspected of many more. A complete DNA profile couldn't be developed for the serial killer until the blood was found. The full profile will be uploaded to the FBI's national database Friday, giving authorities key evidence to possibly link Bundy to long-unsolved crimes.

The vial was discovered after Florida authorities received a call from a detective working a cold case in Tacoma, Wash. The blood had been taken in 1978 when Bundy was arrested in the death of a 12-year-old girl in Columbia County, Fla., The News Tribune reported.

The Tacoma detective was investigating the 1961 disappearance of Ann Marie Burr, a six-year-old who vanished from her home in the middle of the night. Bundy is among several possible suspects.

Longest bra chain attempt tied in knots

An attempt at the world record for longest chain of bras has been called off after organizers caught a snag, the BBC reported.

The United Kingdom group, known as "hookers" were trying to link enough bras together to wrap around the Worcester racecourse 95 times, or over 160 kilometres, according to Global Post.

The current record for longest chain of linked bras, 166,625 in total, is held by Australians.

But organizers said the bras became tangled as they were removed from the boxes, and could not be separated quickly enough to challenge the Guinness World Record.

"We couldn't get the bras out quick enough," one of the bra chain organizers told the BBC. "Like Christmas lights, you put them away nicely, but when you go to get them they don't come out." ● METRO

Learning from apes

► Rise of the Planet of the Apes director speaks about carrying on the franchise traditions

CHRIS ALEXANDER
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

The last time the world saw a movie about a world run by talking monkeys it was in director Tim Burton's wonky 2001 remake of Franklin J. Shaffner's landmark future shock sci-fi classic Planet of the Apes. Burton's redux offered impressive updates in prosthetic ape make-up effects (tweaking the iconic original masks designed by John Chambers) but little else was bettered, with a goofy, tongue-in-cheek tone replacing the first films intelligent social paranoia and terror.

And now comes yet another re-visit, Rupert Wyatt's Rise of the Planet of the Apes, opening wide this Friday. And though it's a film that no serious Apes fanatic asked for, it's clear after talking to Wyatt that when it comes to treating this franchise re-boot with both affection and respect, he isn't monkeying around.

"We made a radical departure from the original story," Wyatt says, "which had a plague wiping out pets and apes becoming slaves, becoming pets and domestic servants. That was fantastical. But we started with something a bit more plausible, which is the aspect of creating intelligence within existing primates through genetic research."

While certainly its own entity and designed as ground zero in a proposed new Apes series, Rise is in many ways a loose remake of the fourth official Planet of the Apes picture, 1972's Conquest for the Planet of the Apes. Like that film, Rise charts the revolution of a chimpanzee named Caesar (played by the late Roddy McDowell in both Conquest and the final film, Battle for the Planet of the Apes), who leads his simian comrades in a bloody war to overturn supremacy of the world from human to ape. But unlike Conquest, the apes were not realized by actors wearing masks. Instead actor Andy Serkis (King Kong) becomes a digital chimp using sophisticated modern motion capture technology courtesy of Weta Workshop (Avatar).

"It was the only way," says the director, "that we could authentically capture their movement. The closest model for what we've done is King Kong but the technology has been perfected since then...every strand of hair has been individually designed."

Marvel Comics says the mantle of Spider-Man — killed earlier this summer — is being taken up by Miles Morales, a half-black, half-Hispanic teen keen on following in Parker's steps.

► A once bustling port, Victoria-by-the-Sea now draws visitors with its small-town charm and laid-back vibe ► Tiny Prince Edward Island town boasts a historic theatre, lighthouse museum and the biggest tree on the island

► Time seems to have passed by Victoria-by-the-Sea, a once-busy port that boasted three wharfs.

Plenty to explore by the sea

For visitors to quaint and picturesque Victoria-by-the-Sea, P.E.I., it seems as if time has passed the community by — and that's a good thing.

The relaxed atmosphere of a community that has seen little change in decades is just fine with visitors and the collection of artisans who make the village their home.

"This is gorgeous, just beautiful," said Dodie

Smith of Gatineau, Que., during a recent visit.

"It's just a beautiful, tranquil place to come."

A once bustling port, Victoria was founded in 1819, and by the late 1800s the settlement boasted three wharfs and many thriving businesses.

"It was the third largest port in Prince Edward Island at one point," said Henry Dunsmore, who owns the Studio Gallery along with his wife Doreen.

But Dunsmore said as better roads were developed it became less expensive to export products by trucks, rather than by ships.

He said with the extension of the Trans Canada highway the community was eventually bypassed and many businesses left.

"Victoria went into a lull and basically became a quaint little village for about two decades, and then the community dwindled as people started moving away for jobs," Dunsmore said.

At the centre of Victoria is the community hall. For the last 30 years it has been the Victoria Playhouse.

The 154-seat theatre is home to performances between late June and the end of September that include both locally produced plays and professional productions.

"It's small, it's intimate, it's beautiful," said general manager Pat Smith.

There's a lot to discover while waiting for a show to start, as you visit the museum in the lighthouse or stroll down Russell Street to see the biggest tree in P.E.I. Along Main Street and a few side streets you will find an amazing selection of small stores.

NEWCOMERS' GUIDE TO THE CITY

Best city getaways

Whether you're looking for a picnic spot or walking trail, Vancouver's parks have something for everyone Here are some highlights, from waterfalls to birding tours

TEXT BY STEPHANIE ORFORD, YLVA VAN BUUREN AND TERRIS SCHNEIDER

FLICKR: FUJITARIUI

QUEEN ELIZABETH PARK

WHY WE LOVE IT: Once a rock quarry, Queen Elizabeth Park is now a stunning collection of manicured gardens and lawns (and considered Vancouver's horticultural jewel) — and you're invited to picnic there while you enjoy the views of the city and mountains. Paved pathways provide easy access. Bring your Frisbee or play bocce. Visit vancouver.ca/parks for events and amenities.

WHAT YOU'LL SEE: The spectacular Quarry Gardens change seasonally and include a small rose garden and Asian-inspired landscaping.

DON'T MISS: The Bloedel Floral Conservatory, a dome-enclosed arboretum housing an ecosystem of tropical plants and animals. Meet more than 100 tropical birds including Charlie, the peach-coloured cockatoo from Indonesia. Admission is $5 with reduced rates for children, youth and seniors. Preschoolers get in free.

HOW TO GET THERE: Between Cambie and Main Streets off West 33rd. From downtown, take the Canada Line SkyTrain to King Edward Station, then walk four blocks south along Cambie.

FLICKR: STOPTHEPAVE

BURNS BOG

WHY WE LOVE IT: Burns Bog is a great opportunity to experience and learn about the ecosystem that the peat bog supports (the bog is a major carbon sink, natural fresh water reservoir and oxygen producer for the Lower Mainland).

WHAT YOU'LL SEE: Along trails including a two-kilometre boardwalk, which is wheelchair- and stroller-friendly, you might see several endangered species that call the bog home, including the southern red-backed vole, the red-legged frog and the greater sandhill crane. Sphagnum moss is the peat-forming plant that gives the bog its high water retention. Keep an eye open for rare plants including cloudberry, bog-rosemary and velvet-leaf blueberry.

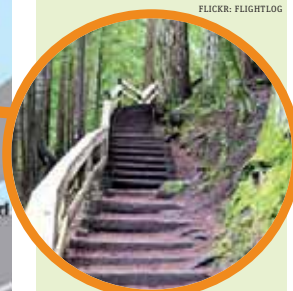

DON'T MISS: The birds! Bring binoculars for an up-close look at some of the bog's 175 species of birds or take a guided tour. The next tour is on Aug. 20 and costs $5 per person. Sign up at burnsbog.org.

HOW TO GET THERE: Find the DNR north of 72 Avenue and east of Highway 91 in Delta. A gravel road runs along the eastern edge of the park. See burnsbog.ca or burnsbog.org for a map and more detailed directions.

LYNN CANYON PARK

WHY WE LOVE IT: The park, which is part of a temperate rainforest at the foot of Mt. Seymour, is a wonderland of streams, waterfalls and beautiful forest.

WHAT YOU'LL SEE: Local plants include western red cedar, douglas fir, western hemlock and sitka spruce (visit the Lynn Canyon Ecology Centre for information). Sometimes the red-breasted sapsucker, a woodpecker with a red head, can be heard hammering its beak against the trees. Other residents: squirrels, raccoons, deer — and banana slugs, named for their yellow skin that is sometimes spotted brown like a ripe banana.

DON'T MISS: Several swimming holes along the trails, as well as the Lynn Canyon suspension bridge.

HOW TO GET THERE: From downtown, take the Sea Bus to Lonsdale Quay. The #229 bus from the Lonsdale Quay bus loop will take you to the main entrance of the park. See lynnecanyon.ca for more info and a virtual tour.

It's a hard rock life in Penticton

I'm no daring adventurer.

"Danger" is not my middle name.

In fact, walking up a short staircase can trigger my paralyzing fear of heights.

But while visiting the beautiful little city of Pentiction, in B.C.'s Okanagan region recently, I just had to confront my fear in the name of fun. Just above the quiet little city, towers Skaha Bluffs, a very popular and world renowned rock climbing area, and a scenic one at that.

Three parallel canyons contain some very intimidating sheer rock climbing walls, with frightening names like The Fortress and Doctor's Wall. I've never done any rock climbing or repelling down rock cliffs, but I soon found myself donning a helmet and strapping into a harness, ready to "walk" down a

What to do

- Visit local wineries: Nearby Naramata features several great wineries including Laughing Stock Vineyards, and Hillside Estate Winery. Many also have fantastic restaurants with grape vines as a backdrop.
- Stay at God's Mountain Estate: This mountain top Bed and Breakfast features cool Mediterranean architecture, and a very eclectic ambience. Honeymoon couples like to stay in the famous roofless room.

very steep 40 foot rock wall.

A good rule of thumb while doing this is not to look down. Repeat ... don't look down, especially if you're afraid of heights. Admittedly, my heart was beating like a drum as I slowly worked my way down the rock face. Fear hit when I glanced down to see ant-sized people.

Thankfully, in about two minutes if was all over and I was on the ground, standing upright again.

Skaha Bluffs is just one jewel in the under-rated Penticton area, which is nestled between Skaha and Okanagan Lakes.

Perhaps the most famous local pastime in the summer months is the inner tube canal ride which runs between the two lakes. This isn't rocket science. You basically grab a tube, jump on, and then lazily float from Okanagan lake to Skaha lake via the canal.

On any given warm day, hundreds partake in this relaxing pastime, making the odd mid water collisions inevitable. Still, it's almost a right of passage for out of towners. With desert-like heat in the summer, and little rain or snow in the winter, Penticton has to be considered a holiday spot in B.C.

Simplifying a Middle Eastern fave

► The Muslim holy month of Ramadan began this week ► Celebrate with a tasty shawarma

With the Muslim holy month of Ramadan having started this week, millions of the religion's followers will be fasting during the long, hot days of August.

Ramadan requires daily fasts of food and water during daylight hours.

Typically, observers eat a meal before dawn and break their fast at sunset. The fast-breaking meal is seen by many Muslims as an opportunity to gather with family and friends. Ramadan is also seen as an opportunity to improve — spiritually and personally.

A favourite Middle Eastern dish is the Shawarma, a sandwich-like wrap of shaved chicken, lamb, beef or goat. The meat is placed on a spit and may be grilled for as long as a day.

In this version, you're able to make the dish at home in a just few steps.

► The shawarma can be made with a variety of meat.

Preparation:

1 Spread cardamom, cumin, turmeric and paprika over chicken, add oil and rub with hands so pieces are covered. Refrigerate up to 24 hours or if using, set aside. Season with salt, pepper before sautéing.

2 Heat non-stick skillet. When very hot, add half chicken and sauté, covered, on high flame (cook chicken in two batches so you don't overload pan). When chicken is golden-brown on bottom, turn over and continue cooking until done. Wait 2-3 minutes. Transfer to cutting board, slice thinly.

3 To make the garlic sauce, blend garlic, salt, lemon juice until smooth. Gradually add oil in thin steady, stream while motor still running, until the sauce has thickened.

4 To assemble, spread warm bread with garlic sauce then arrange lettuce, tomato, chickpeas, onions, coriander. Top with chicken. Roll up, cut in half to serve.

Ingredients:

Shawarma

- 2 lbs. / 1 kilo boneless skinless chicken thighs (don't discard fatty parts)
- ¾ teaspoon cardamom
- ¼ teaspoon cumin
- ¼ teaspoon turmeric
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- 1 Tablespoon oil
- salt and ground pepper

- 6 pita breads
- shredded lettuce
- 1 sliced tomato
- 1 red onion
- few handfuls of chickpeas
- coriander sprigs

Garlic Sauce

- 8 cloves garlic
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 cup lemon juice
- 1/2 cup sunflower oil
- 3/4 cup olive oil

Drink of the week

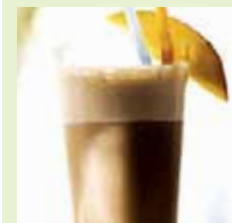

Icy Mocha Smoothie

The cool coffee and chocolate milk provide a refreshing substitute for your usual java.

- 500 ml (2 cups) chocolate milk
- 375 ml (1 1/2 cups) ice
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) instant coffee
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) chocolate syrup
- 250 ml (1 cup) vanilla yogurt

In blender, combine chocolate milk, ice cubes, coffee, chocolate syrup; puree until smooth. Add yogurt and blend.

LAWYERS' CRITICISMS CAN BE DAMAGING

WORKPLACE LAW

DANIEL LUBLIN
DAN@CANADA
EMPLOYMENTLAWYER.COM
TWITTER: @DANLUBLIN

"It is easier to be critical than correct." — Benjamin Disraeli

Today, much of the workforce feels empowered to complain. When upset about their boss or their job, these employees no longer visit their doctors seeking a note for a leave of absence. Now they just call their lawyers. But what happens when a lawyer's letter goes too far? One B.C. employee recently found out the hard way.

Sukhwinder Grewal and her boss Dalbir Sohi had a rocky relationship from the get-go. Grewal, a branch manager for the Khalsa Credit Union in B.C., was frequently on the receiving end of Sohi's criticism.

Deeming his contempt to be unwarranted, Grewal often responded with letters defending herself and her actions. Sohi viewed those letters as insubordinate and disrespectful.

Matters came to a head when Sohi discovered that Grewal's personal home mortgage, through the credit union, was inputted incorrectly. He believed that Grewal had inappropriately received a personal benefit and wrote a memo to the credit union referring to Grewal's mortgage as a "scandal" and raising other issues he had with her performance. Before Sohi could question Grewal, she went on disability leave.

Upon her return to work, Grewal learned that during her leave Sohi had disclosed her alleged mortgage "scandal" during the credit union's governance hearing and that her name appeared in a public document.

Believing this was highly inappropriate, Grewal's lawyer sent a letter to Sohi accusing him of creating a pretext to dismiss her and demanding that he apologize to Grewal and acknowledge that his allegations were baseless and brought in bad faith to harm Grewal and her reputation.

The letter concluded by threatening to sue Sohi if he did not apologize. The credit union responded on Sohi's behalf claiming that, through her lawyer's letter, Grewal had just resigned.

At a recent trial, the judge determined that, but for her lawyer's last letter, Grewal would have been wrongfully dismissed.

STUDENT VOICE

TALENTEGG.CA

I attend the commerce program at Queen's University and just finished my second year.

I began my official job search in December. I searched online by going to the main job search engines or company websites that I thought I would enjoy working for and applied to any positions that interested me.

This was a long process as many of the jobs posted had long online applications that were tedious and time-consuming to fill out. Unfortunately, job after job, I was rejected. The rejections early on motivated me to keep on applying. By

► Amanda Perkins

April, I was tired. I had applied to over 100 jobs, all in different fields and specialties, and was not accepted by a single one.

I came home during my exam break, and found a job at a local pub. I was excited to finally be hired after an exhausting job search!

In the first few weeks as I was being trained, I didn't receive many hours, so I looked for something else part-time. I found on Kijiji an unpaid social media internship for a fitness blog. I emailed the company right away and I received a response a few hours later. I then went to Toronto for an interview. It was an informal interview, where I had the opportunity to talk about my interests and strengths rather than answering formal questions. I left the interview feeling confident and, thankfully, was hired a few days later.

I have found a good balance between a fast-paced waitressing job that involves interacting with customers, and a second job where I can exercise my writing skills and knowledge of fitness and nutrition.

Thinking back on my job hunt experiences, I probably wouldn't have done anything differently. I believe being persistent will benefit students in the end.

Timing is also another factor to consider. It helps to apply to companies when they are looking for employees, instead of in a slow season when they will take your resumé and put it on file for later.

There are jobs out there, you just have to put in the effort to look for them.

Unplug the professional you

▶ A how-to guide to leaving those workaholic ways at the doorstep

DREW
LIFE@METRONews.CA

When you're hooked on workahol, living through the smartphone decade doesn't help.

Reachable everywhere, at all hours of the day, today's workforce can be forgiven for feeling like a servant class to BlackBerry overloads, buzzing with new commands. If you don't take a step back to draw boundaries between the conference room and the living room, work life coach Sue Thompson says, you could sacrifice your free will to a phone.

"We no longer have a work life and a home life," she says. "We have a life and we really need to decide how we want to live that life."

Chances are you haven't had time to ask yourself

▶ If connecting with clients comes before hugging your hubby at home, you may want to make some changes.

that existential question, says Shirin Khamisa, founder of Careers By Design.

"Look at your habits, get a reality check," she says. "Is the way you're functioning really serving you? If you're texting at the dinner table, how is that affecting your interaction with your family? If you're a young, single person, how does always being connected affect your personal life?"

Keeping your thumbs surgically attached to the phone could hurt more than your dating career, she notes. It could destroy your actual career.

"Often times working less makes you more productive," she explains.

She encourages you to ask yourself: Is it truly worth hammering away into the deep night, before slumping to work the next morning, tired, hollow, and ineffective?

"Start thinking in terms of results," she urges.

Create a Switch

Trouble disconnecting? Create what career counsellor

Courtney Anderson calls "a mental switch."

"Take that switch and say 'I'm off, I'm logging off,'" she recommends. "Take personal time. Otherwise, with technology, it's possible to be always working."

"You have to create a psychological barrier more than anything," agrees Thompson.

She suggests a change of clothes.

"Dress professionally for work," she offers. "That way, when you get home and you take off those clothes, that's your psychological barrier that shows you're at home."

If not you could lose perspective.

"If you don't make that serious effort, it's all going to blend in," she says. "I'm sure in five or 10 years, it's going to be even harder."

Healthy Tiger back on course

MATT SULLIVAN/GETTY IMAGES

► Tiger Woods, right, walks up the fairway with his swing coach, Sean Foley of Burlington, Ont., yesterday at Firestone Country Club.

► 14-time major champion returns from injury to changed golf world
► 20 months since his last win

Tiger Woods was on the practice range just as the sun began to rise yesterday over Firestone, his first time on a PGA Tour golf course in nearly three months.

Even as the season heads toward a conclusion, Woods can't wait to get started.

Woods showed up at the Bridgestone Invitational at No. 28, his lowest world ranking since the start of his first full season on the PGA Tour. He has a new caddy — at least temporarily — in childhood friend Bryon Bell.

For Woods, however, the biggest change is how he feels about his health.

“The great thing is I don’t feel a thing,” Woods said. “It feels solid. It feels stable. No pain.”

“It’s been a very long time, and it feels good to go out there today ... go practise and feel nothing and walk around and pretty much do anything I want on the golf course.”

Asked how long it has been since he felt so good physically, Woods replied, “Years.”

It almost seems that long ago since he was last in action. Woods, who was No. 1 in the world a year ago, has not played since he walked off the course after nine holes May 12 at The Players Championship with recurring injuries to his left knee and Achilles tendon.

He said he injured them during the third round of the Masters while hitting a shot in an awkward stance in the pine straw on the

“I’m excited to compete, to play. And, hopefully, to win the tournament.”

TIGER WOODS

17th hole. Woods said if he had sat out the rest of May, he would have been fine the rest of the year, a lesson he learned this time around. He said he started hitting balls a couple of weeks ago and that he got the itch to start playing soon after.

In the three months since he was gone, Rory McIlroy shattered his U.S. Open scoring record to par, and good friend Darren Clarke finally won a major at the British Open at age 42. Steve Stricker has won twice to become the highest-ranked American.

Clarke is paired with Woods the first two rounds.

“Tiger has been the best player in the world for a very long time,” Clarke said. “He has been the guy over my career that has set the benchmark for all the rest of us, and personally he’s a good friend of mine.”

Woods still managed to make news while not playing when he fired his caddy, Steve Williams, after a 12-year partnership during which he won 13 majors. For all the talk about disloyalty — Williams caddied for Adam Scott at the U.S. Open, then again at the AT&T National without seeking permission — Woods said only that it was “time for a change.”

Kesler may miss season start after hip surgery

Vancouver Canucks centre Ryan Kesler has undergone hip surgery, the team said in a release yesterday.

The NHL’s Selke Trophy winner is expected to make a full recovery in 10 to 12 weeks.

Vancouver opens its season on Oct. 6, about nine weeks from now.

Kesler needed the operation to repair his labrum, which is a type of cartilage that surrounds the socket of ball and socket joints. It helps to provide stability to the joint while allowing flexibility and motion.

“After consultation with our team physicians following the playoffs, it was deemed that Ryan would require a procedure on his hip,” GM Mike Gillis said in a release.

Mustang-based engine

What truly differentiates the Sport from the other Edge models (SE, SEL and Limited) is the 3.7-litre V6 that generates 305 horsepower and 280 pound-feet of torque.

This new powerplant, which is also found on the 2011 Ford Mustang, provides impressive thrust along with equally impressive fuel economy.

Luxury amenities

Complementing the Sport's performance and exterior appearance are its many and varied luxury amenities, many of them technical in nature.

Along with all-wheel-drive, they include Ford's MyFord Touch voice-command technology that replaces traditional vehicle buttons, knobs and gauges with LCD screens and five-way controls like those found on cell phones and MP3 music players.

Chrome exhausts

Unique smoked headlight and taillamp designs, oval chrome exhaust tips and body-coloured lower front and side trim are all part of the Sport package.

As well, it's important to note that a specially tuned suspension has been dialed in and contributes to the Sport's hunkered-down stance and sharpened reflexes.

WHEELBASE MEDIA

Most sport utility vehicles or wagon derivatives of passenger cars come across as being more utilitarian than sporty. Even a bit boring.

However, the Sport edition of the Ford Edge definately runs counter to this axiom, both in terms of style and performance.

The Edge has been around since the 2007 model year and was given an interior and exterior makeover for 2011. In addition, its 3.5-litre V6 was treated to a 20-horsepower surge (to 285 from 265).

The Edge Sport is different enough from the regular Edge to be considered a whole other vehicle. As the name implies, this is one five-passenger wagon that has been built to please buyers looking to spice up their rides, but still need a multi-purpose machine capable of carrying a wide variety of gear.

Visually, the Sport differs from the rank-and-file Edge in several ways. The blacked-out grille is certainly one telltale sign and the massive 22-inch forged aluminum wheels are another.

Sport clearly pushes the Edge's envelope in terms of power and content. But it's not about just adding more.

It's about putting together the right combination of parts and pieces to create an effective image. And this Edge does exactly that ... brilliantly.

Setting the record straight

▶ Staging over 700 cars for a world record is no easy task ▶ Just ask Garry Sowerby

GARRY SOWERBY
WHEELBASE MEDIA
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

The parking lot was empty with the exception of a 12,000-horsepower Chevy "Bowtie". The massive expanse of tarmac was usually filled with cars and trucks belonging to the workers that assemble Chevrolet's iconic Camaro hot rod at the state-of-the-art assembly plant in Oshawa, Ont.

Not the morning of June 10, 2011, though.

Preparations for clearing the lot had begun a month earlier with announcements to plant workers that half of their massive parking lot would be closed for a few days.

So, the day before — June 9 — we fenced off most of the points of entry, coned off the rest and spent a couple of hours building the yellow outlined Chevrolet logo with 30 brand-spanking new Camaros.

With the sun about to rise, a dozen traffic cones were strategically positioned in an effort to visualize what to do when 700 more Camaros arrived at the parking lot. The first ones began to trickle in at 7 a.m. By 11 a.m., Camaro owners from Texas to Nova Scotia needed to jockey their cars into position for an aerial photograph of our staging masterpiece.

The goal of the effort, part of the 23rd annual Camaro Nationals hosted by the Ontario Camaro Club, was to establish a new Guinness World Record for the largest car mosaic.

I've set four Guinness records over the years for long-distance driving and 18 The centrepiece of the mosaic required 18 yellow cars and a variety of others. It took two hours of meticulous work to make sure each of those cars were properly spaced.

although my involvement with this record attempt was limited to being the staging marshal, it felt good to be part of the plan.

The strategy was to build a frame of new Camaros in the shape of the Chevrolet "Bowtie" logo. They had to be spaced and carefully lined up with exit options for each car. No trial runs, the first attempt was the call for action.

Now, anyone who knows how to drive should have a decent idea how to park a car. Drive into a driveway, back into a spot at the supermarket or parallel park in front of a coffee shop. No sweat. But there's a significant difference between "parking" a car and "staging" several hundred cars.

After 30 years in the business of designing and producing media and promotional events, I've been around the track with vehicle staging. But 700 of them? In four hours? With 700 different drivers? Without any practice?

The first few Camaros trickled in, beautiful first-generation models with tight-sounding V8 engines. I began a line four paces from the north side of the Chevy logo. Soon, two-way radios were crackling about the dozens of Camaros lining up at the south entrance to the parking lot. The staging race was on.

By 10:40 a.m., nearly 700

Camaros of all years had been staged. A few minutes later a small plane was overhead. I knew there was a photographer on board taking pictures to send to Guinness Superlatives.

At day's end, thousands of Camaro owners and fans had toured Oshawa's Camaro assembly plant. Outside they drooled over the cars and shopped in the vendor market before the staging masterpiece evaporated as hundreds of Camaros were driven to homes and area hotels. And the next two mornings my humble crew and I were back at the empty lot at sunrise, waiting to do it over again.

2 Cameras are always handy, but how many of us actually carry one around, especially when we're out on the road? Yes, there's the camera (hidden somewhere within the buttons) of your cell phone that seems to take all kinds of blurry, shaky pictures. Then there's the Pro Series Mini Cam key-chain digital camera that you can use for either pleasure or for evidence-gathering purposes if you're involved in a collision or other emergency situations. tbotech.com/keychain-digital-camera.htm

3 Given all the various nooks and crannies for storing stuff inside your car, it's amazing how cell phones, coins, sunglasses, portable audio devices and other assorted gear will often wind up on the floor or lost between or beneath the front seats. Focus known for fun-to-drive dynamics

► Model: 2008 to 2011 Ford Focus ► Vehicle Type: Compact Car

SECOND GEAR

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

Available from 2008 to 2011, the last-generation Ford Focus was available exclusively in coupe and sedan body styles.

All models got a two-litre, 140-horsepower four-cylinder engine with a five-speed stick as standard, and a four-speed automatic as an option.

Trim levels included S, SE, SEL and SES from econo-box to loaded, and feature content included heated seating, Ford Sync, alloy wheels, mood lighting, cruise control, Bluetooth, power accessories, remote access and a self-dimming rearview mirror.

What Owners Like

- It seems Ford nailed this generation of Focus where interior dimensions, overall size, value for the money and exterior styling were concerned.
- Generous headroom, the Sync connectivity system, a fun-to-drive character and generous trunk space were often praised by owners.

What they dislike

- Many owners wish for more pizzazz in the Focus's rear styling, as well as some extra power for passing and merging.
- Other Focus drivers wish for a higher-quality interior or feel, and complain of an abundance of 'filler' buttons that take the place of un-fitted options.
- A few reports of rougher-than-expected ride quality round out the list of owner-stated complaints.

2009 Ford Focus SES

Common issues

- Be sure to have any used Focus you're considering checked over for abnormal suspension and tire wear, noting that rattling, popping or clunking sounds from the front end could indicate a problem.
- Ensure the doors seal tightly and aren't in need of adjustment, and be sure the vehicle's wheel alignment is within spec, too. Unevenly-worn tires can be a warning sign of an alignment problem.
- On SYNC-equipped models, shoppers are advised to confirm functionality with their wireless device, as well as proper operation from the steering-wheel mounted SYNC controls.
- Some owners have reported problems with the automatic transmission, ranging from fluid leaks to hard shifting to in-warranty transmission replacement.

Verdict

A used Focus looks like a fairly reliable used-car buy, especially with the five-speed manual.

Shoppers after a good overall deal on a machine that's enjoyed for fun-to-drive dynamics and generous interior space should include it on their list of prospective test-drives.

This doesn't seem to be a widespread problem, but shift quality should be noted, and the unit should be checked by a Ford mechanic. Stick with the five-speed manual transmission where possible.
